

Placeholder API

Within BattleArena, there is support to display arena info through a plugin called PlaceholderAPI. If you are unfamiliar with the plugin, it allows for you to show information with certain placeholders (e.g. %player_name% will return the player name) in plugins that have support for PlaceholderAPI. An example usage of this is displaying the number of players in a competition on a hologram through PlaceholderAPI.

Placeholders

These are the placeholders for BattleArena. They are split into three sections: general placeholders, map placeholders and competition placeholders. General placeholders are not tied to a specific competition and show general information about arenas. Map placeholders pull information from a specific map. Competition placeholders will only resolve for players in a competition and will vary from player to player depending on which competition they are in.

General Placeholders

These placeholders show statistics for the arena specified. This information will look the same to each player seeing it in-game. <arena> is a placeholder for the arena to display information on (i.e. arena, battlegrounds, skirmish, etc.)
